

An Interview with Dr. Lewis E. Thayne

PRESIDENT OF LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE

This President's Report highlights Lebanon Valley College's many rich connections—with the community, donors, faculty, fellow educational institutions, and others—that benefit our students, alumni, and the College itself.

Q. In what ways is the concept of "Connections" woven throughout our new strategic plan, Envision 2020?

A. I can think of a number of ways in which a theme of "Connections" could be identified in Envision 2020 [EV2020]. To begin with, it is a strategic vision that connects organically to the whole community—it is our shared purpose and collective challenge. Also, Envision 2020 connects everything we do to the world, to a global context—Graduating World-Ready Students. At an elemental level, our campus and our mission connect us, bring us together in a learning community. There is a significant emphasis in Envision 2020 on inclusiveness as the path to high performance, connecting people who are different from each other and who sometimes have very serious dialogues about those differences. Beyond these thoughts, there is so much more that can be said about the new strategic plan outside the constraints of one particular theme or concept.

Q. OK, let's transition to the broader context of the strategic plan and its implementation. What should people expect from Envision 2020?

A. They should expect that we will internationalize the student experience: curriculum, co-curriculum, and recruitment of international students. This is the World-Ready Success Model that a large and diverse committee will work on. They should expect a stronger and more explicit connection between learning and doing, college and career. In simple terms, this is our Initiative for Graduate Success. They should expect that the Centers of Demonstrated Excellence will consolidate academic strengths and build distinction. They should expect that we will implement a redefined, signature general education program for all undergraduates. They should expect to see a College that embraces diversity and inclusiveness as the true path to excellence. And they should expect that we will revise our financial model in ways that will enable us to achieve sustainability.

Q. If you would, please talk a little about the implementation plan on the website. How should visitors to the site interpret the progress of the plan?

A. The implementation plan is a dynamic document, so visitors should be aware that as we move forward the website will reflect that movement. Second, the implementation plan is not a set of fixed points that will be irrelevant as soon as we reach them. It is a practical expression of how we plan to realize progress toward the four overall strategic goals in EV2020. I would expect us to go into the website every quarter and update our progress and next set of objectives. Right now, we put up the minimum amount of information on the public site that we will add to continuously.

Q. Since this is the President's Report, would you reflect on the College as a whole?

A. Sure. This is a time of renewal and transformation at Lebanon Valley College.

In August, we had one of the largest entering classes of the past 10 years—and a higher percentage of those students wanted to live on campus than ever before. It isn't just new students and new student patterns. We also welcomed 11 new faculty members, or 10% of our full-time faculty, in August. Since 2012, one-fourth of our faculty are new to the College. The new faculty members bring new approaches to their disciplines, new teaching and learning pedagogies, and new subjects for courses and for research.

We talked about athletic training and exercise science, new majors approved last year and now exceeding their enrollment goals this fall. Clearly, the synergies with physical therapy and our athletic program are compelling. Over the summer, the Music Department received NASM [National Association of Schools of Music] accreditation for their newly configured major in audio & music production. With the new configuration, our students can prepare for entry into the entertainment industry and into the myriad of opportunities for audio & music production in the global economy.

It would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of the faculty's work in approving and now implementing a new general education program. The challenge for Lebanon Valley is to prepare graduates who will "contribute ethical, creative solutions to unscripted problems under conditions of uncertainty." The goals of the new curriculum will accomplish exactly that charge, but the implementation will occur over the next four years. This sort of long-cycle innovation and implementation is where the strategic vision of EV2020 will have its greatest impact.

Rebecca Sausser '16 (center) shares some of the research she and more than a dozen classmates have worked on in "The Sesquicentennial Project" classes taught by Dr. Rebecca McCoy, associate professor of history (far right). Their work, which spanned two semesters and a summer Arnold Grant, will be displayed throughout campus during the College's 150th anniversary next year. Also pictured are (l. to r.): Bashu Timsina '16, Leslie Hiller '18, Allonne Wilson-Brennan '17, Dr. Lewis E. Thayne, Sausser, Cameron Avery '18, Cameron Alexander '16, and Dr. McCoy.

Beyond the curriculum itself, we implemented learning communities into our residence hall program and based them on the first-year seminar topics chosen by faculty members. Greg Krikorian [vice president of student affairs and dean of students] is implementing a new Student Innovation Fund to strengthen student experience and create new dimensions to student contributions to their experience. And we have begun recruiting for our new NCAA women's ice hockey program. It doesn't hurt that our men are now ranked #4 as they look to move back into NCAA Division III.

The College has embarked on development of a Campus Master Plan along with Envision 2020. I am now fundraising for the proposed $20 million health professions building, our first academic building on the north side of campus. There is also planning for new capital projects: Shankroff Tennis Center, renovation and improvements to Miller Chapel, and renovation and repurposing of the first floor of the Vernon and Doris Bishop Library. [All these projects will be made possible entirely through generous gifts to the College.]

Q. In other issues of The Valley you discussed innovation. Do you still see that continuing at LVC?

A. It is accelerating. Dr. Michael Green [vice president of academic affairs and dean of the faculty] and the faculty will move forward with proposals for new academic programs in analytical finance, computer data science, a four-year combined accounting and MBA degree program, and a new health professions major in communication science disorders and speech language pathology. The scope and number of new programs, performance indicators, plans, and accomplishments are cause for celebration for the sheer volume of good news, hard work, and work in progress. There is no doubt that our collaborative strategic planning exercise has cultivated a leadership mindset on campus. Renewal, innovation, connection, and aspiration are exactly the stances we should take at this time. I have attended a number of gatherings for college presidents and I leave each one with a confirmation that LVC is doing all the right things and that we are moving with an appropriate urgency.

Let's not forget, however, that the context for this good news remains a problematic financial environment for higher education and for Lebanon Valley College. The issue of affordability is very clearly one that will be a continuing challenge for LVC and all colleges. Data indicates that we must move quickly to: (a) broaden our geographic market; (b) develop academic programs with market appeal; (c) recapture our appeal to moderately affluent households; and (d) increase fundraising.

Q. In what ways can our alumni connect with their alma mater to increase the value of their degrees, both for themselves and for current students who will soon follow in their footsteps?

A. While we have been able to push a lot of information out to our alumni and keep them informed, we need to do a better job of having their connections come back to us; to let them know that their experiences, opinions, and ideas count and that we need to hear them. I think it starts with an interactive social media program, which is developing. It starts with a redesigned website, which is also underway. It starts with a programmatic emphasis that looks at alumni as potential resources and provides a forum for listening to their ideas and then being able to act.

My view of the College's original mission, and our restatement of the mission in Envision 2020, is that connections are essential. They are of the essence. The collaboration among faculty and students, along with students and students, has always been part of our educational heritage and our educational signature. So have institutional connections with church, state, and business. The thorough and practical education that Lebanon Valley College has provided since 1866 still works, very well.

CONNECTIONS

By Christine Brandt Little

As the College prepares to launch its 150th anniversary celebration Feb. 23, 2016, we explored our continuous legacy of caring,
which extends from the College's beginnings to the present day.

It's safe to say that every Lebanon Valley College student on campus today is here because of the generations of Valley students who went before them. Students who came to Annville eager to explore their dreams, and who left equipped to achieve them: students who, as they became graduates of LVC, felt a deep sense of gratitude to the alumni and friends who had preceded them—alumni and friends who had supported them by offering mentoring, providing scholarship funds, and donating gifts that deepened the College's academic resources. Students who, once they had graduated from LVC, sought to repay that debt of gratitude by continuing the College's heart-felt tradition of alumni and friends supporting current students.

This chain of connection, forged in the earliest days of the College, continues today. For instance, 98 percent of our students receive financial assistance in the form of grants and scholarships funded by Lebanon Valley alumni, such as Dr. John “Jack” Bowman Allwein '56, whose unprecedented $5-million estate gift in 2013 has so far enabled 11 students of exceptional promise to attend LVC on a full scholarship.

Beyond financial assistance, our students benefit from the foresight and caring of alumni such as Dr. Susan Smith Fitzpatrick '80 and Louis “Chip” Fitzpatrick III '81, who have supported many projects, including the Neidig-Garber Science Center and the Vernon and Doris Bishop Library. In addition, key supporters of our students have been friends such as Vernon and Doris Bishop, who made leadership gifts for the construction of the Vernon and Doris Bishop Library in

Louis “Chip” Fitzpatrick III '81 and Dr. Susan Smith Fitzpatrick '80

1995, among other projects. The Bishop Foundation, of which the Bishops' daughter, LVC Trustee Kathy Bishop, is an officer, recently committed $1.5 million for the library's first-floor renovation in 2016.

These connections extend through families who have made LVC their academic home for generations—such as Sean Hackett '93 and Jennifer Hanshaw Hackett '93—and for multiple siblings in one generation—such as Amisha Lala '15, D'17 and her sister Vidya Lala '17, and the brothers Haisam Hassanein '14, Wesam Hassanein '15, and Amr Hassanein '19.

These caring connections take other forms, of course. There are trustees such as Jim Glasgow Jr. '81, who seek out our students as internship candidates. There are faculty who, such as Dr. Patrick Brewer, associate professor of mathematical sciences, seek out students of promise. Moreover, there are alumni such as Josh Kesler '98, who make caring commitments to revitalizing their own communities.

Read on for stories of how LVC's enduring Global Network makes a real and positive difference in the lives and educations of our students.

GENERATIONAL CONNECTIONS

Sometimes a family has so many connections to LVC that the past, present, and future are woven into a unique and lasting legacy. The Hanshaw and Hackett families are just one example.

Sean Hackett '93 majored in music education at LVC. Today, he is a choral music teacher at Conrad Weiser High School in Robesonia. Sean's relationship with the College has evolved over the years, from neighbor to student to alumnus. Today, he serves as a partner through providing supervision to LVC student teachers. Sean's link to the College recently took on a new dimension as he and his wife, Jennifer Hanshaw Hackett '93, became Valley parents when their daughter, Morgan Hackett '19, arrived as a freshman this fall.

Sean's connection to LVC actually began in childhood, when his parents bought a house on College Avenue. "We used to roller skate on the quad and ride our bikes all over campus," Sean says. He admits that at first he did not intend to attend the college next door. "I wanted nothing of the sort—in fact, I joined the Marines to get a good distance between myself and Lebanon County," he says. Nevertheless, when he was disqualified from military service because of asthma, his voice teacher, Philip G. Morgan, professor emeritus of music, suggested he sign up for a class at LVC to keep himself occupied. "I did that fully expecting to transfer—but I didn't," Sean notes.

And it's a good thing he didn't, because Sean met his future wife on the College's football field. "Jen was in color guard, and I played trumpet," he says.

Jen studied English communications with a chemistry minor. Today, she is a freelance writer and editor. While Sean grew up right next to campus, Jen has a rich "family tree" of Valley connections, including her mother, Nancy Bowman Hanshaw '50; her father, Harry Herr Hanshaw '50; her uncle, Dr. Howard Anthony "Tony" Neidig '43, H'04, late distinguished professor emeritus of chemistry; her maternal aunt (and Dr. Neidig's late wife), Gene Bowman Neidig '44; two sisters, Nan Hanshaw '88 and Deborah Hanshaw Steiner '77; her sister Debby's husband, Dr. Jerald Steiner '77; her cousin (and Dr. Neidig's daughter), Kathy Neidig Calabrese '73; and Kathy's husband, Tony Calabrese '73.

Given the Hacketts' rich relationship with Lebanon Valley, perhaps it was inevitable that when it came time for their oldest daughter, Morgan, to look at colleges, LVC would be one of the first schools to come to mind. Morgan has played violin since childhood and planned to major in music or music education, so LVC's strong Music Department placed the school in high contention.

"I've always been very attached to LVC because of the connections with my family and because I had such a great experience there, so I really wanted Morgan to go there—but at the same time we wanted her to choose the school that was right for her," Jen says. "She chose LVC because the orchestra director, Dr. Johannes Dietrich [Newton and Adelaide Burgner Endowed Professor of Instrumental Music], is so good."

Today, Morgan Hackett '19 is a freshman at LVC majoring in music education with a minor in physics. "My [paternal] grandparents live on campus basically, so I grew up learning how to ride my bike around the academic quad," Morgan says. "It's somewhat weird to transition to this being my college. But the campus is so different from when my parents were here, I still have to show them around."

These days, Sean brings the youngest Hackett, Catherine, age 3, to campus to attend Kindermusik classes and visit her older sister. Jen enjoys being more involved with LVC again. "I like being back on campus," she says. "I had such a wonderful experience there—I made friends that I'm still friends with today. Those friends last a lifetime. It's a cliché, but it's true."

SCHOLASTIC CONNECTIONS

Forging a connection with the nearby Milton S. Hershey School (MHS) made a lot of sense to Dr. Patrick Brewer, associate professor of mathematical sciences, even before LVC's Envision 2020 strategic plan identified inclusive excellence as a key strategic priority. And over the years, the College has worked to enrich that connection. Milton Hershey's vice president of administration, Elliott Robinson, has served on the College's Board of Trustees since 2008, and MHS students have taken college classes for credit at LVC for some time. In fact, the College offers a criminal justice class this semester and a law-related class next spring at MHS.

This year, six MHS seniors, all of whom have completed the highest math class offered at their school—calculus—have come to campus each week to pursue more advanced math classes with LVC mathematical sciences faculty. They also take English 111, and two of their MHS classmates take other liberal arts courses, all of which helps them get a better feel for college life.

Brewer hopes this is just the beginning, and that the two schools will expand course offerings available at the College for MHS students. "When you come to our campus, you can be a part of the community," he says. "You're taught by full-time faculty members who in some cases collect and grade assignments from each student every day—you won't find that anywhere else. It builds the students' confidence and enables them to explore what they're interested in."

Brewer, who served on the College's Strategic Planning

Morgan Hackett '19

Steering Committee, believes the effort makes sense for many reasons, primarily because it's the right thing to do: "As a part of our values—who we are and who we want to be—it's worth doing," he says.

MHS graduate Jermaine McQueen '17 excelled in high school. An honor roll and National Honor Society student, he served in student government and was captain of the wrestling team. As a member of the College's football team, he has found LVC a good fit. "At first it was a little rough for me to adjust to college, but my coaches and the team made LVC feel like home," he says. "Most importantly, the coaches understand that being a student comes first." He notes that the team's mandatory study hall during the first semester of freshman year helped him learn valuable study skills that have paid off—today, the criminal justice major is on LVC's Dean's List with a 3.4 GPA.

(l. to r.): Christopher Santana '19, one of four current MHS graduates enrolled full-time at LVC, Jermaine McQueen '17, and Dr. Patrick Brewer

McQueen believes giving MHS students opportunities to study at LVC benefits them in many ways. "It gives the Milton Hershey students a chance to take on a real challenge and learn what college work is," he says. "They receive the chance to develop study habits early, before they come to college."

SIBLING CONNECTIONS

When Amisha Lala '15, D'17 came to campus on a visit during high school, she knew she was in the right place. "It was one of those cheesy moments when I thought, 'Oh, I think I belong here,'" she says.

And today, Amisha believes she made the right choice. "Honestly, it keeps getting better," she says. She earned her bachelor's degree in health sciences last May, and undertook her first clinical experience as a physical therapy doctoral student last summer. "We've had observational hours before, but it's different to be hands-on with patients and see them progress," she says. "It's affirming my decision to pursue physical therapy as my career."

When it came time for Amisha's younger sister, Vidya Lala '17, to look at colleges, Amisha tried to be helpful while encouraging her sister to make her own decision—but she was thrilled when Vidya chose LVC. "I wouldn't have known about LVC unless Amisha went here," says Vidya, who initially had intended to attend the University of Pittsburgh. "Then, I got a call from Dr. Dale Erskine [professor of biology], and he told me I had received a scholarship from the Biology Department. He convinced me that I would have the opportunity to get to know my professors, and they would get to know me—something that wouldn't happen at Pitt without a lot of effort. So I decided to come here and discovered he was right."

Vidya, who plans to attend medical school, is a biology major with a chemistry minor and one of two students serving on the College's Board of Trustees. She is active on campus in other ways as well, including serving as president of Colleges Against Cancer and participating in the Student Summit on Inclusive Excellence.

"It has been really nice to have Amisha on campus because a little piece of home is here with me," Vidya says. "We've had very different experiences at Lebanon Valley College, and they've both been positive."

LIFE-CHANGING CONNECTIONS

Perhaps no program better illustrates the life-changing connections between LVC's alumni and its current students than the John Bowman Allwein Scholars Program, the College's most prestigious scholarship for incoming freshmen.

Dr. Lewis E. Thayne, LVC's president, established the program in 2013 in honor of Dr. John "Jack" Bowman Allwein '56, whose legacy to the College includes the largest estate gift in Lebanon Valley's history.

Selected for their extraordinary accomplishments and exceptional promise in academics, leadership, or music, Allwein Scholars receive a full-tuition scholarship; an annual stipend of $2,500 for research, travel, or study; and a faculty mentor. Dr. Jeffrey Robbins, chair of religion and philosophy, professor of religion, and director of the American Studies Program, serves as faculty mentor for the Allwein Scholars.

Shaquel Marshall '18 is among the College's first Allwein Scholars. She graduated from Western High School, a public girls' high school in Baltimore City, where she was involved in the National Honor Society and her school's step and softball teams. For Shaquel, a sophomore double major in global studies and sociology, the impact of Dr. Allwein's generosity and foresight is never far from her mind. "Without his big heart and his caring and the great education that he received from LVC, I wouldn't be here," she says. "I always think about that, and I'm honored and grateful for it."

While Shaquel is still exploring a range of career options, she is sure of one thing: "I know that when I leave Lebanon Valley, I want to make an impact," she states. "I want to be able to give back to LVC just like Dr. Allwein was able to give back. I see myself being able to get somewhere in life."

Ciara Marshall '18—no relation to Shaquel—is another member of the inaugural class of Allwein Scholars. She majors in biochemistry & molecular biology, with an eye toward medical school, and plays on the women's lacrosse team.

Early on, LVC attracted Ciara's attention. She remembers visiting campus and attending a presentation by Dr. Wally Patton, associate professor of chemistry. "He talked about some 20 students he'd had during the past 10 to 15 years, and told us where they went after graduation and where they were now. It showed how much the professors at LVC invest in their students and what they do," she says. "That was a turning point for me. The professors here really care."

Like her classmate Shaquel, Ciara, who is also from Maryland, feels indebted to Dr. Allwein and hopes to emulate his example. "He did a lot of amazing things in his lifetime. He had the privilege of doing those things because he worked really hard, but instead of just keeping it all, he decided to help others," she notes. "He was very driven and oriented toward helping others to have the opportunities that he had, and I'm very much oriented the same way." Ciara hopes to honor Dr. Allwein's example by one day providing medical care in Third World countries.

Dr. John "Jack" Bowman Allwein '56

Shaquel Marshall '18 (l.) and Ciara Marshall '18

Jack Allwein's connection to Lebanon Valley continues to broaden as the second class of Allwein Scholars arrived in Annville this fall: Justin Cammarota, Rachel Duong, Jerin George, Madison Martin, Ximena Mistrelovic, and Heather Riutzel.

SCHOLARSHIP CONNECTIONS

When they arrived at LVC as students in the late 1970s, Dr. Susan Smith Fitzpatrick '80 and Louis "Chip" Fitzpatrick III '81 each had their own reasons for feeling especially fortunate—and somewhat surprised—to be here.

Susan's father, Jacque Smith '61, attended LVC on the GI Bill and received scholarship support through the Alumni Association, so understandably the College had been high on the list of schools he wanted his daughter to attend. "I was a high school valedictorian and had a lot of aspirations," Susan notes. "But as a family we didn't have the financial means for me to attend a school like LVC. My father was a teacher, and back then, that was pretty much like taking a vow of poverty! But my dad really wanted me to go to a private liberal arts school, so of course he pushed Lebanon Valley."

Susan applied for and was offered a Presidential Scholarship—and suddenly an LVC education was within reach. "It was the scholarship that enabled me to go to LVC, and I had a wonderful education there," she says. Susan took full advantage of her years in Annville, majoring in chemistry and playing on the women's basketball team.

Like her father, Susan's future husband (and fellow chemistry major), Chip Fitzpatrick, also attended LVC on the GI Bill. Moreover, like Susan, he was somewhat surprised to find himself on campus—though for different reasons. "I was somebody who got into a lot of trouble academically in high school," Chip admits. "I joined the military, and then eventually started taking classes at Harrisburg Area Community College. I transferred to LVC through the recommendation of a chemistry professor there, Barry Barnhart '58."

It was at LVC that Chip really came into his own. "At Lebanon Valley, people took an interest in me—people such as Dr. Tony Neidig '43, H'04 [late distinguished professor emeritus of chemistry], Dr. Jim Spencer [former associate professor of chemistry], Dean Rinso Marquette '48 [late vice president emeritus for student affairs], Dr. Warren Thompson [associate professor emeritus of religion and philosophy], and others," he says. "They recognized that I had potential, and they invested a lot of time in me outside of the classroom. Because of that I've had a very successful career—and because of that I feel like I have an obligation to help others do the same thing."

After graduation, Chip earned a master's degree in chemistry from St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia. He worked as a chemist from 1983 until 1999, co-authored at least four papers, and has been named co-inventor on 10 U.S. patents. Today, he is associate director at Novartis Pharmaceutical Corporation.

Susan also launched a successful career. After graduation, she took a job in the medicinal chemistry department of Merck Research Laboratories and went on to earn her doctoral degree in chemistry from Bryn Mawr College. Eventually, she moved out of the lab into information technology, ending her nearly 34-year career at Merck as a director in their research IT area. "It was a really varied career over time," she says. "I needed that chemistry background, but my career certainly evolved and grew from there—that's where the well-rounded liberal arts education is an advantage." Susan eventually left Merck and today is a vice president with Jones Lang LaSalle commercial real estate.

"It's meaningful for me to give back to LVC," she says. "Education is extremely important to our society and to our democracy, so as I look at where I want to spend my time giving back, certainly education is near the top of that list. And so, of course, is LVC."

Chip, who along with Susan is a member of LVC's Leadership Council, agrees: "It was a privilege to be able to go to LVC, and it's very important to me to be able to give back to the school so that other people can get a very good, well-rounded education and contribute to society in a meaningful way,” he says. “It’s imperative that alumni help out the school—and more importantly, the students who go there.”

The Fitzpatricks have followed this philosophy with exceptional generosity over the years, joining the Thomas Rhys Vickroy Society, which recognizes leadership gifts of $1,000 or more during each academic year annually, since 1997, and contributing meaningfully to other projects, including the construction of the Neidig-Garber Science Center and the Vernon and Doris Bishop Library.

FACULTY CONNECTIONS

Sometimes LVC’s newest alumni are its strongest advocates. Such is certainly the case with Haisam Hassanein ’14, whose positive experiences strongly influenced his two brothers, Wesam Hassanein ’15 and Amr Hassanein ’19 in their decisions to follow him to LVC.

Haisam, a political science and international studies double major, made the most of his time at LVC. Active in international and social justice issues on campus, he joined the Social Justice Institute and the Pallas Honor Society. He participated in the College’s European Union (EU) Simulation project and presented at the Inquiry Symposium. In addition, he undertook a number of independent study projects with faculty, including Dr. Diane Johnson, chair and associate professor of politics; Dr. Philip Benesch, associate professor of politics; Dr. Christopher Dolan, professor of politics and director of global studies; Dr. Jeffrey Robbins, chair of religion and philosophy; and Dr. Michael Schroeder, assistant professor of history.

Wesam Hassanein '15

During his senior year, Haisam served as a research intern at the influential Washington Institute for Near East Policy, and was inspired by the diversity of his colleagues there. “A lot of the interns and research associates there had a Jewish background. I am an Arab and a Muslim. I thought, ‘They come here to study and understand my culture, why shouldn’t I go there and learn about theirs?’” Therefore, after graduation Haisam enrolled in a master’s degree program in Middle East Studies at Tel Aviv University in Israel.

After completing his coursework in the program last spring, Haisam ranked as valedictorian of his class and was given the honor of delivering the school’s commencement address. The BBC broadcast his speech, which reflected on the peaceful diversity of cultures and religions he had encountered in Tel Aviv, and his essay about the experience was published last August in the Jerusalem Post.

Haisam is eager to continue learning. “I’m going to stay another year in Israel to improve my Hebrew and work on my thesis—and interview as many Israeli politicians as I can so I understand them more,”

he says. After completing his program, Haisam plans to return to Washington, D.C., to work as a research analyst studying Israeli foreign policy in the Middle East, as well as relations between Israel and the U.S. “My family made a big sacrifice to bring us here,” he says. “I would like to build myself and be part of the American society and contribute to my adopted country.”

The middle brother of the family, Wesam came to LVC largely because his brother Haisam recommended it—though the school did an effective job of recommending itself as well. “I really picked LVC because of the size of the classes,” Wesam says. “I didn’t want to sit in classrooms with 200 people. I like to have one-on-one contact with my professors so I can improve my research and communication skills.”

At LVC, Wesam majored in political science and explored a deep interest in the American political scene. “When we came here, Egypt was under a dictatorship and we were fascinated by the freedom in the U.S. and how American politics work,” Wesam says of his family. “I understand that many Americans are stressed about it, but we found it was as interesting as a soccer game.”

Wesam credits Dr. Johnson and Dr. Dolan with helping him make the transition to American scholarship. “He [Dr. Dolan] helped me improve my written communication—obviously English isn’t my first language so I had to really work on my speaking and writing skills, and LVC did a great job of teaching me to write a research paper,” he says. In fact, during his last semester, Wesam took part in an internship in the Dauphin County commissioners’ office during which he was asked to present a 10-page research report on property taxes before the commissioners. Its positive reception confirmed for Wesam that his LVC education had prepared him well.

Like his brother, Wesam participated in the College’s EU Simulation and conducted multiple independent study projects on issues relating to the Middle East. Next fall, he’ll begin a master’s degree program at American University’s prestigious School of International Service. “My goal is to apply to the State Department and at some point I hope to be a U.S. ambassador to a Middle Eastern country,” he says. “My brothers and I are interested in public service to serve this great country that gave us this opportunity to achieve our dreams and reach our potential.”

Youngest brother Amr came to LVC in part because of his brothers’ experiences—but also because of his high school counselor’s recommendation. “LVC has been really good—even better than I expected,” he says. A history major, Amr expects to follow the family tradition of public service. “My goal for the future is to become a professor of Middle Eastern studies, especially Islamic history, so that I can teach youth about their world’s history.”

FAMILY CONNECTIONS

The Vernon and Doris Bishop family’s philanthropy has been integral, not just to the look of LVC’s campus, but to the depth of its academic resources. The Vernon and Doris Bishop Library, built in 1995 through a leadership gift from the Bishop Foundation, stands as the most obvious testament to the family’s legacy. The Vernon and Doris Bishop Distinguished Chair of Chemistry—renamed in 2014 as a prestigious professorship—is another.

Next summer the campus will again be reshaped through the family’s generosity when Bishop Library undergoes a dramatic renovation thanks to a $1.5 million gift from The Bishop Foundation. This gift will enable the College to transform the first floor of Bishop Library and provide technological advancements for generating and sharing ideas. Envisioned as an open and flexible space, the revitalized Bishop Library will incorporate many of the strategic priorities identified in the College’s recently adopted strategic plan, Envision 2020.

“Technology and the digital age are transforming our world in ways that we could not have imagined 20 years ago when the Bishop Library was built,” Kathy Bishop, daughter of Vernon and Doris, has said of the Foundation’s gift. “Higher education has not been immune to these changes, which are making obsolete the hard-copy textbooks, lecture formats, and traditional classrooms that many of us experienced. Today’s college student expects flexible scheduling, digitized resources, and collaborative learning experiences. My family is proud to facilitate the transformation of the Bishop Library to support this new learning environment.”

Bishop serves as chief executive officer, president, and chairperson of Lebanon Seaboard Corporation, the company founded by her late father in 1947. She has been a member of the College's Board of Trustees since 1998, currently as vice chair. Kathy became involved with LVC because of her commitment to education. “I joined the Lebanon Valley College board because I was interested in our educational system and seeing that young people had access and good educational opportunities. I wanted to be part of that whole activity,” she notes. “This was at the very beginning of the John Synodinos presidency [1988–1996], when he reached out to the business community to gain our insights, thoughts, and suggestions on ways to strengthen the College and help it fulfill its mission.”

Kathy was well positioned to help guide the College's move into the future. After receiving a bachelor's degree in physics from Wellesley College, she earned a master's degree in management from the Sloan School at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). After pursuing additional studies at Harvard University, the Sorbonne, and the University of Madrid—and following a career that took her to California and even Australia—Kathy returned to

Kathy Bishop, LVC Trustee

Lebanon in 1987 to take on a leadership role at Lebanon Seaboard. She has worked in various roles within the company and was named CEO in 2004.

A long-time friend of the College, Kathy's father, Vernon, was LVC's second-ever recipient of the prestigious Founders Day Award in 1981. After his wife, Doris, died in 1994, Vernon married Lebanon native Trudie Hewitt, who has enthusiastically continued the Bishop family's tradition of philanthropy to the College. Vernon Bishop died in 2004 at the age of 93.

CAREER CONNECTIONS

An outstanding wrestler and football player at LVC—including twice being named all-conference in football—Jim Glasgow Jr. '81 was equally focused on being a good “student-citizen” as an undergraduate studying business administration and philosophy. He served as a resident assistant (RA) as a junior and head RA as a senior, was elected president of the Student Judicial Board, and served as a student representative to the College's Board of Trustees.

“I'm a fervent believer in student involvement in athletics, theater, the band, or any group where you learn to be a positive member of a team and community,” Glasgow says. “As part of any team, you have to learn to make compromises—sometimes at the individual's expense so that the team benefits.”

This heartfelt belief inspired Glasgow when he reconnected with his alma mater after a visit from Jessica Bostdorf Ritchie '99, M'06 almost a decade ago.

Since graduating a quarter-century before, Glasgow had kept in sporadic touch with some of his former professors, among them Dr. John Heffner, professor emeritus of philosophy, and Dr. Phil Billings, professor emeritus of English. He returned to campus only for the occasional Homecoming.

But since reconnecting, Glasgow has become a member of the College's Board of Trustees, where he helped lead—financially and administratively—the recent revitalization of Arnold Field, served as a Lazin Resident, and contributed generously to the College.

Glasgow grew up in a working-class family in Pittston and received generous financial aid to attend LVC, which is part of his motivation for wanting to give back. He and his wife, Patricia, have been extremely generous, and are Lifetime Vickroy Society Associates, an elite society dedicated to donors who have contributed more than $100,000 in their lifetime.

Another valuable way in which Glasgow contributes to his alma mater is by mentoring exceptional students through his position as partner, managing director, and portfolio manager at Five Mile Capital Partners in New York City. Glasgow has mentored Richard Drazin '11, Renee Fritz '13, Kat O'Hara '15, and Stephanie Cosgrove '16 through internships at his firm.

Glasgow wants to give back in other ways because he had a difficult time finding work in New York after graduation due to Lebanon Valley's lack of name recognition in the big city, he says. It wasn't until he earned his MBA at George Washington University that he was able to find employment.

"The College and our alumni need to do a better job of marketing LVC and spreading the word about our excellent students and academic excellence," Glasgow notes. "I began hiring Lebanon Valley interns—the best of the best—to give them an opportunity that I didn't have. If I can provide a student the opportunity to experience interning at an international investment firm in New York City with some of the largest investors in the world, it can be a life-changing experience for students with high ambition."

O'Hara, an international studies major, met Glasgow during her term as a student trustee. O'Hara also served as an RA and captain of the track & field team. "Everything I did at LVC was fashioned with the idea that I had come to this campus to make a difference," she notes. She served on the board's Finance Committee with Glasgow, and eventually he suggested that she interview for an internship at his firm.

Glasgow requires his interns to experience every aspect of his business, and seeks to teach them the importance of transparency and collaboration in all phases of the work. "Stephanie [Cosgrove '16] was one of four interns this summer," Glasgow says. "She was able to meet with investors, work with accountants, and learn all the real-life aspects of working on a $370-million condo conversion in Manhattan."

The conversion occurred near the National September 11 Memorial & Museum and added an additional dimension to the internship. "Working across the street from the memorial was a reminder of the atrocities of that day," Glasgow says. "It was profound, but there was an intellectual gratification about what we were doing in support of our families, community, and country."

"You don't have to be a finance major to intern at Five Mile, but I definitely look for difference makers who are voracious learners," Glasgow notes. "Being a mentor to LVC students is important to me. I feel great when students leave and tell me they had a profound life-changing experience. Even if they end up pursuing a different career, they learned something about themselves—and about life."

O'Hara certainly feels that way about her experience. "It was a life-changing internship. Jim is an amazing businessman—he has such grace and tact in the way he conducts business,” she says. “He is one of my greatest mentors, personally and professionally.” O’Hara credits Glasgow and her internship with Five Mile Capital Partners for preparing her for her current position as a client service representative with the PFM Group, the nation’s leading independent municipal finance advisors.

COMMUNITY CONNECTIONS

Josh Kesler '98, owner of the newly opened Millworks in Harrisburg, knows a great deal about the revitalizing power of community. The Millworks—which combines a locally sourced restaurant and bar, open air biergarten, art gallery, 35 artist studios, and live music in a building slated for inclusion on the National Park Service’s Registry of Historic Places—is central to the refurbishment of midtown Harrisburg.

The business has been a labor of love—and a testament to Kesler’s deep sense of connection to the Harrisburg community. After graduating from LVC, Kesler taught briefly at the Harrisburg Academy before moving into the city’s real estate market. After several years, however, he and his wife found themselves wanting more. “In 2012, my wife and I were looking to invest in something we really believed in and that hopefully would have an impact on the neighborhood at large,” he explains. They ultimately invested in a dilapidated industrial warehouse located next door to the Broad Street Market, the city’s 155-year-old farmer’s market. After making extensive renovations, they opened the Millworks in early 2015. Not long after, Kesler was named president of the Broad Street Market Corporation.

“As time goes by you become more committed to the relationships and the friends and the family that you’ve built over the early part of your adult life, and moving somewhere else loses its charm,” Kesler says.

Kesler’s work is already receiving impressive plaudits. He was named 2015 Entrepreneur of the Year in October by the Capital Region Economic Development Corporation.

Strictly speaking, there is little in Kesler’s academic background to prepare him for his career in Harrisburg real estate and owning the

Josh Kesler '98

Millworks—he was a political science and German double major at LVC. Nevertheless, he credits the College with equipping him to achieve everything he has since leaving Annville. “The professors at LVC channel the big wide world into a small classroom of 12 people, and that was transformative for me,” he says. “My professors pushed analytical thinking and skills that definitely gave me the tools I needed as I developed in my professional career. Could I have done all these things without that background? I think the answer is no.”
